

Brainwashed - Deerhunter

Written by Jon Whitney

Sunday, 29 April 2007 03:55 - Last Updated Thursday, 20 June 2013 07:26

Listening to Deerhunter on record was no preparation for their intense live set. While they're making waves on the indie rock circuit, watching them is more like witnessing a hybrid of Antony and Iggy Pop sing for Buzzcocks or Wire. Talking with Bradford Cox, the singer, was as entertaining as it was enlightening. It's no surprise he's been charming the world with his humorous openness and compelling live presence. Don't discount them as another disposable generic indie rock band without soaking in both the live performance and hilarious interview. They're all great people and I personally look forward to spending time with them again.